15:30 The Crucial Role of Supply Chain Assurance in successful delivery of megaprojects

Our global supply chains have become interconnected, which poses many risks to our operations. Health and safety incidents, illegal activities, and worldwide pandemics can devastate our livelihoods and financial resources.

Managing these variables is becoming increasingly complex in 2023, and the stakes are growing globally. As ongoing legislation from various countries complicates supply chain integrity, compliance with health and safety standards remains imperative.

Globally, materials suppliers are under increased scrutiny and expected to provide more transparency. It is clear that ignoring supply chain activities is no longer an option as we look ahead. Globally, effective compliance management processes and complete supply chain visibilityare advantageous but essential

Afternoon Tea and Networking Break 14:30

- Construction contracts should include 15:00 provisions that facilitate dispute avoidance and claims handling, to prevent disputes escalating through formal dispute resolution procedures, and effective procedures aimed at encouraging early amicable solutions, lower costs and fewer delays to the project overall.

Project managers and contract administrators are given the opportunity to contribute at the drafting stage of a construction contract. If this opportunity does not arise in the contractual negotiations, it is vital that project managers and contract administrators at least understand their rights and obligations under the contract so that they can exercise those rights and entitlements and do not purport to give instructions, waive requirements or otherwise make agreements that are inconsistent with the express contractual terms.

Will explore about contract management tools within construction contracts: early warning provisions; rights of access to information; audit rights; conditions precedent to claims; careful record-keeping; clear lines of communication and authority; clear change control procedures; and dispute resolution and avoidance provisions (the main focus)
